the properties and function of human communication human communication is a field of interest of enormous breadth being one which has concerned students of many different disciplines it spans the imagined gap between the arts and the sciences but it forms no unified academic subject there is no commonly accepted terminology to cover all aspects the eight articles comprising this book have been chosen to illustrate something of the diversity yet at the same time to be comprehensible to readers from different academic disciplines they cannot pretend to cover the whole field some attempt has been made to present them in an order which represents a continuity of theme though this is merely an opinion most publications of this type form the proceedings of some symposium or conference in this case however there has been no such unifying influence no collaboration no discussions the authors have been drawn from a number of different countries the first article by john marshall and roger wales great britain concerns the pragmatic values of communication starting by considering bird song and passing to the infinitely more complex meaningful values of human language and pictures the pragmatic aspect means the usefulness what does language or bird song do for humans and birds what adaptation or survival values does it have these questions are then considered in relation to brain specialisation for representation of experience and cognition

this work organizes human communication theories by the process of explanation not by traditional contexts it is designed to show students how communication theory actually works in their professional and personal lives
